The Inaugural Senior Research Symposium

Celebrating Student Research

The Senior Research Symposium, held May 3 in Roy O. West's Wood Study, was a celebration of student work. Five seniors presented their Honor Scholar projects and senior theses. Presentations included research on legal precedent regarding and alternatives to battered women syndrome; post-recovery warm-up in swimming; hormonal birth control and stress response; and moral psychology frameworks and more! One student commented that due to the pandemic, they haven't been able to present publicly very often, so they were excited to have a chance to present, and another student mentioned that they present HoScho projects at midterm but do not have another presentation of their final work so it was a great opportunity to showcase the research done for their theses. Faculty Achievement Celebration

Co-hosted with Faculty Development, the DePauw Libraries joined in the celebration of faculty scholarship by honoring faculty publications of the past year and having the authors and editors sign their monographs- which will be kept in the University Archives. There were 14 monographs published with DPU faculty as the author or editor. It was a fantastic time to applaud our faculty who contributed to scholarly discourse in their disciplines. From Pliny to Howardena Pindell to Prestige Television to Racial Attitudes, and MUCH more-- the afternoon was an exciting moment to congratulate and uplift their important work.
